in the early hours of d day 1944 a group from the us army 2nd rangers battalion were sent on one of the legendary raids of world war ii the mission was to scale the cliffs overlooking omaha beach and assault the german coastal artillery at pointe du hoc it was thought that only a raid could ensure that the guns would remain silent during the d day landings but allied intelligence was wrong after climbing the cliffs under aggressive german fire and securing the battery site the rangers discovered that the guns themselves were no longer there it was only

due to the heroic actions of the rangers involved that the guns were located in firing positions facing Utah beach and destroyed before they could be used in the first of a brand new series for Osprey this act of audacious daring is brought to life complete with illustrated artwork maps and rare German accounts taking a more critical look at the story Steven Zaloga analyses every detail from the intelligence failings to the boldness of the rangers in the face of such odds as a response to the increasing violence in our culture the widening ideological divides and the growing gap in economic well being there is greater awareness that a deeper sense of community is desperately needed but even as we acknowledge the need to build community the dominant on the ground practices about how to engage people civically and organizationally remain essentially unchanged we still believe community is built with better messaging more persuasion and social events for people to get to know each other better all of which is naïve in this new edition Block draws on a decade of putting these ideas into practice to emphasize what has worked and extract those thoughts that were nice but had no durability he explores how technology instead of bringing us together has driven us into more isolation new examples show that community building can be a more powerful way to address social problems than more traditional policies and programs and encouragingly Block insists this is really simple once we decide it is essential he offers a way of thinking that creates an opening for authentic communities to exist and details what each of us can do to make that happen this volume explores theoretical discourses in which religion is used to legitimize political violence it examines the ways in which Christianity and Islam are utilized for political ends in particular how violence is used or abused as an expedient to justify political action this research focuses on premodern as well as contemporary discourses in the Middle East and Latin America identifying patterns frequently used to justify the deployment of violence in both hegemonic and anti-hegemonic discourses in addition it explores how premodern arguments and authorities are utilized and transformed in order to legitimize contemporary violence as well as the ways in which the use of religion as a means to justify violence alters the nature of conflicts that are not otherwise explicitly religious it argues that most past and present conflicts even if the discourses about them are conducted in religious terms have origins other than religion and or blend religion with other causes namely socio economic and political injustice and inequality understanding the use and abuse of religion to justify violence is a prerequisite to discerning the nature of a conflict and might thus contribute to conflict resolution
